DDCI:

I had a phone call from Beecher this morning (during which he was very grumpy about our turn-down of his request for a briefing on the Soviets in the Middle East).

He then said, "Well, here is another thing: I have heard good things about your new Number Two and then I met him briefly at a social affair recently. Is there any chance of getting together with him for a little chat?"

I told him it was my feeling you hadn't been doing much of this since taking over your rather time-consuming duties here, etc. etc., but I certainly would run it past you to see your reaction.

You recall the various comments at this morning's meeting.
